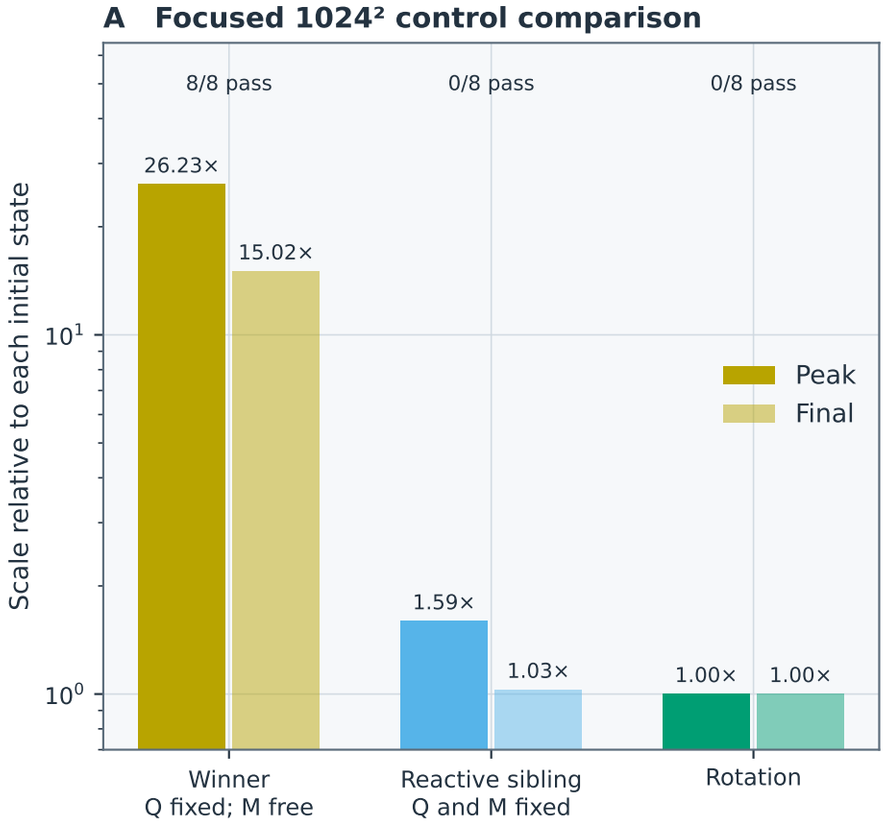
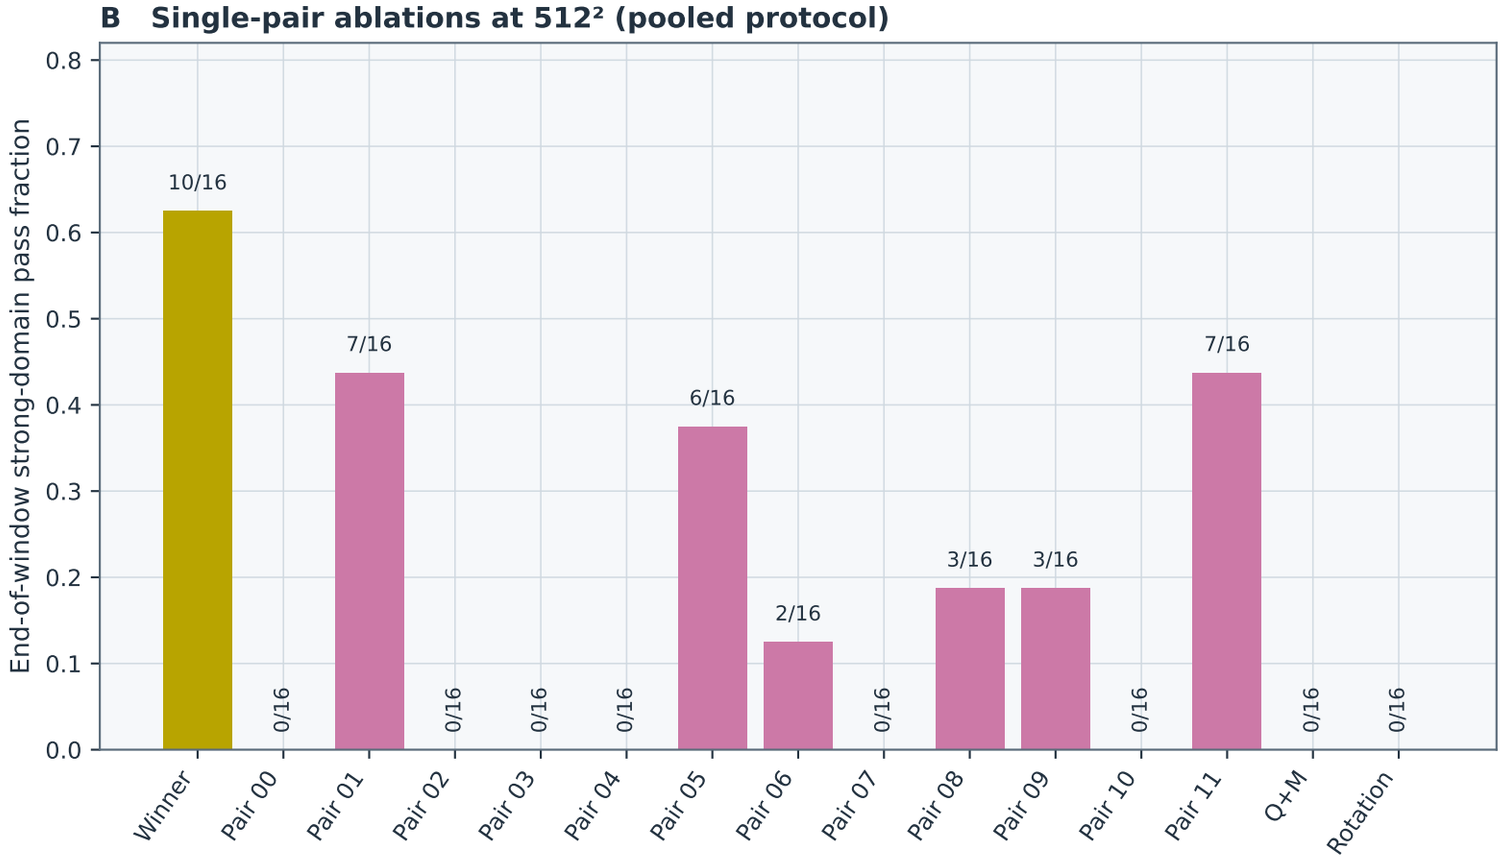
Matched controls constrain the mechanism in the tested rule family

The reactive double-conserving sibling and rotation do not reproduce the same endpoint; several removals suppress it.





Separate protocols are shown in A and B. These comparisons do not prove that double conservation forbids organisation in general.